The Power of Purpose-Driven Business: The Business Case for Social Impact
Matthew D. McGowan, CSP, Director, Social Impact, Staffmark Group

This presentation explores why social impact is no longer just a moral imperative—it's a strategic advantage that drives measurable results for organizations, their clients, employees, and communities. Matthew McGowan will share insights into how purpose-driven initiatives strengthen talent pipelines, increase employee engagement and retention, and enhance client relationships. Using Staffmark Group's RGF Connect initiative as a real-world example, he will demonstrate how social impact initiatives create value across multiple stakeholder groups, benefiting organizations, employees, clients, and communities alike.

Change Management with a Technology Twist
Staci Cima, CCE, Director of Credit, Echo Electric

Change is inevitable—but success is not. In today's fast moving business environment, organizations are under constant pressure to transform while keeping operations running, cash flowing, and people engaged. This session explores what change management really looks like when technology and automation are introduced into mission critical functions like credit, order to cash, and finance.

Drawing on real world experiences, this session goes beyond theory to address the human, operational, and technological realities of transformation. Attendees will hear practical “war stories” that highlight why even well planned initiatives can struggle—and what separates successful change from stalled adoption. The discussion will cover common barriers such as fear, resistance, communication overload, and competing priorities, as well as proven strategies to overcome them.
